

ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE (ESL)

---

ESL 600 Culture and Community for Graduate Studies I 1

This is a beginning level course that prepares students to integrate their understandings of their home cultures and communities into their graduate studies situated in the local cultures and communities.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 601 Culture and Community for Graduate Studies II 1

This is an intermediate level course that prepares students to integrate their understandings of their home cultures and communities into their graduate studies situated in the local cultures and communities.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 602 Culture and Community for Graduate Studies III 1

This is an advanced level course that prepares students to integrate their understandings of their home culture and communities into their graduate studies situated in the local cultures and communities.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 610 Academic Listening I 2

This is a beginning level course that prepares students to engage in academic lectures and participate in academic conversations through the use of effective listening strategies.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 611 Communication and Presentation I 3

This is a beginning level course that prepares students to engage in academic dialogues with peers and faculty, participate in small group and class discussions, and present information in their academic discipline orally.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 612 Academic Reading and Vocabulary Development I 3

This is a beginning level course that prepares students to apply academic reading strategies and vocabulary development skills in discipline-specific academic reading tasks.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 613 Writing and Grammar I 3

This is a beginning level course that prepares students to apply their knowledge of English grammar, discourse, and writing conventions in academic writing for graduate-level courses.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 620 Academic Listening II 1

This is an intermediate level course that prepares students to engage in academic lectures and participate in academic conversations through the use of effective listening strategies.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 621 Communication and Presentation II 2

This is an intermediate level course that prepares students to engage in academic dialogues with peers and faculty, participate in small group and class discussions, and present information in their academic discipline orally.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 622 Academic Reading and Vocabulary Development II 2

This is an intermediate level course that prepares students to apply academic reading strategies and vocabulary development skills in discipline-specific academic reading tasks.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 623 Writing and Grammar II 2

This is an intermediate level course that prepares students to apply their knowledge of English grammar, discourse, and writing conventions in academic writing for graduate-level courses.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 630 Academic Listening III 1

This is an advanced level course that prepares students to engage in academic lectures and participate in academic conversations through the use of effective listening strategies.

Notes: Registration restricted to students with conditional admission.

ESL 631 Communication and Presentation III 1

This is an advanced level course that prepares students to engage in academic dialogues with peers and faculty, participate in small group and class discussions, and present information in their academic discipline orally.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.

ESL 632 Academic Reading and Vocabulary Development III 1

This is an advanced level course that prepares students to apply academic reading strategies and vocabulary development skills in discipline-specific academic reading tasks.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate with conditional admission.

ESL 633 Writing and Grammar III 1

This is an advanced level course that prepares students to apply their knowledge of English grammar, discourse, and writing conventions in academic writing for graduate-level courses.

Notes: Registration restricted to international graduate students with conditional admission.